

George Washington to George Mason

In this letter written in 1785, at the height of the debate over tax-supported religion in Virginia, George Washington revealed his support for the proposed tax to his friend George Mason. This issue divided Virginia's leaders. Mason, unlike Washington, strongly championed the separation of Church and State.