

Jefferson to Richard Rush

Thomas Jefferson believed that religion was an entirely private matter, as he explained in this letter to Richard Rush. Jefferson had shared some thoughts on religion with Rush's father, who was a devout Christian and also a close friend. He wanted these letters to be destroyed or returned to him now that his friend was dead.