

Jefferson to Jeremiah Moore

In this letter, Jefferson recalled that he had once supported Virginia's constitutional ban on clergy holding political office. By 1800, however, he had changed his mind. The power of the clergy, which endangered civil rights in many countries and even in some American states, was no longer a problem in Virginia.