

Jefferson to George Washington

In this letter, Thomas Jefferson writes to George Washington in order to try to persuade him to run for a second term as president. Jefferson outlines the nation's current conflicts and controversies, especially the division between the North and the South. He believes only Washington can keep the country united.