

Autobiography

In 1821, Jefferson prepared a draft of his autobiography. He reflected on the events that led to the revolution, as well as his views on religious freedom, the abolition of slavery, the importance of public education, and his affection for France, among other topics.