

An Oration to the Society of the Cincinnati

In this speech celebrating the anniversary of American independence, poet and patriot Joel Barlow lauded the founding of the United States as a unique opportunity. Americans, he believed, could start fresh, free of superstition, tradition, and prejudice. Liberty and learning would prevail in what Barlow called this “empire of reason.”