

Jefferson to James Heaton

Jefferson wrote this letter shortly before his death in 1826. Yet another admirer had asked the still influential statesman to condemn slavery publicly. With some exaggeration, Jefferson claimed that he had spent decades opposing slavery. He also concluded that his speaking out on such a difficult issue would not help to resolve it.