

Jefferson to Archibald Stuart

In this letter to a fellow Virginian, Jefferson showed his early interest in the expansion of white settlement into western territories. He believed that U.S. population would expand westward to the Mississippi River and beyond. Settled largely by farmers from Virginia, Kentucky became the first new western state in 1792.