

Jefferson to William Henry Harrison

In this letter to the governor of the Indiana territory, President Jefferson explained how he would get the American Indians to give up their lands to white farmers. Jefferson's plan was to establish trading posts throughout the West. He believed that Indians would amass large debts to white traders and use their lands to pay these debts.