

Jefferson to Richard Price

In this letter to the English radical Richard Price, Jefferson explained how Americans divided along regional lines on the issue of slavery. He predicted that Price's anti-slavery opinions would find strong support in the northern states and a somewhat favorable reception in Maryland and Virginia, but rejected outright farther south.