

Jefferson to Henry Lee

In this letter written almost fifty years after composing the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson explains his understanding of the document's purpose. He insists that the Declaration was not meant to be an original treatise on political philosophy but rather a representation of the the collective sentiments of the American people.