

Jefferson to Richard Rush

Jefferson worried that the Missouri crisis might lead to disunion, as this letter shows. He predicted that any break-up of the Union would be short-lived, but he still feared that Europeans would see even a temporary division as proof that free government was ineffective and ultimately unworkable.