

Jefferson's Sixth Annual Message to Congress

President Jefferson delivered this address to Congress a few months after Lewis and Clark returned from their expedition. In a message dominated by foreign policy problems and issues, mostly related to the war in Europe, the president pointed to the exploration of the West as an important achievement of his administration.