

George III's Address to Parliament

In this speech in October 1775, George III declares the colonies in rebellion and authorizes the use of force to put down the insurrection. The King accuses American political leaders of engaging in a conspiracy to confuse and inflame the people. He predicts the rebellion will be over quickly and promises to welcome the colonists back into the empire.