

Tea Act

The Tea Act was an effort to rescue the East India Company from bankruptcy. The law lowered the tax on East India tea and gave the Company a monopoly on sales of tea in the colonies. Colonists believed the act represented a covert attempt to get consumers to pay the hated Townshend tax on tea and hence acknowledge Parliament's authority to tax them.