

Lord North to George III

In this letter, British prime minister Lord North suggested changes in the king's response to the increasingly rebellious "inhabitants of the Colonies." Colonists, Lord North declared, were subjects of the king who just happened to live in America. Like any other Britons, they were subject to British law, including all acts of Parliament.