

John Adams to Jefferson

In this letter to Thomas Jefferson written in 1815, John Adams reflects on the history of the American Revolution. Adams states that the revolution would not have occurred without important changes in the ideas and sentiments of the American people in the decade before the Continental Congress actually declared independence.