

Jefferson to John Adams

In this letter, Thomas Jefferson writes to John Adams comparing the French people and their government with the American people and their government. Jefferson expresses great confidence in the American people. He believes that American self-sufficiency, wisdom, and morality will create a system dominated by neither force nor corruption.