

Treaty of Paris Article 10

This document is the treaty ending the American Revolution. Signed on September 3, 1783, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, and John Jay represented the United States in the negotiations with the British. The treaty recognized U.S. independence, gave Americans fishing rights off the coast of Newfoundland, and acknowledged the Mississippi River as the country's western boundary.