

The Federalist Papers No. 22

This document is one of the FEDERALIST essays, a series of 85 articles first published in New York newspapers to provide a sustained case in favor of ratifying the U.S. Constitution. Written by Alexander Hamilton, this essay describes some of the weaknesses of the existing confederation government and argues in favor of a stronger national government.