

Testimony of John Parker on the Battle of Lexington

In this document, John Parker, Captain of the Lexington militia, recounts what happened on the morning of April 19, 1775. Parker claims that he had instructed his men not to shoot and to disperse before the British troops arrived. The British Regulars supposedly fired first. Each side would blame the other for turning the conflict into a shooting war.