

Benjamin Franklin to the Federal Convention

This speech in support of the Constitution was written by Benjamin Franklin. At 81 years old, Franklin was too weak to deliver the speech himself; his colleague from Pennsylvania, James Wilson, gave it for him. Franklin's speech emphasizes that despite its imperfections, the Constitution offers the best hope for securing the country's future.