

Speech in the New York Ratification Convention

In this speech at the New York ratifying convention, Melancton Smith explained his reasons for opposing the U.S. Constitution. Smith feared that the new government would be removed from the people's concerns and favor wealthy merchants over poor farmers. Like many other Antifederalists, Smith also objected to the lack of a bill of rights.