

Petition to the King

This document is the so-called "Olive Branch" petition sent by the Second Continental Congress to George III. In July 1775, certain delegates insisted that the colonists make a final effort to avoid war with Great Britain. The King refused to receive the petition and soon declared the colonies in rebellion.