

Abraham Lincoln to Henry L. Pierce

In this letter, Abraham Lincoln discusses Thomas Jefferson's enduring contributions to American society. He attacks slavery as antithetical to American values. He also comments on the irony that the heirs to Jefferson's political party deny the central principles of their founder: liberty and equality for all people.