

13th Amendment

The 13th Amendment to the Constitution, passed by Congress in January 1865 and ratified by the states in December of the same year, proclaimed an end to slavery in the United States. This amendment was one of three civil rights amendments passed after the Civil War.